Introduction

Historical population census information commencing with the 1790 Federal Census is generally not available at most libraries and public offices. Reference staff members of the Main Library at the State University of New York at Stony Brook recognized the need for a compilation of retrospective county, municipality, and community population data. The task of gathering and organizing this data required project members to obtain all twenty federal census reports, extract the population statistics for New York State, and tabulate the data for all municipalities and incorporated communities ever recorded in the Long Island area. Record cards for more than four hundred places were produced; each one detailed a full census history. The Long Island Regional Planning Board personnel then supplemented the data with unpublished or corrected community data and compiled the statistics into this report.

The resulting publication contains population data only. However, inclusion of a community in this report alerts the user to the existence of other information in a decennial census publication or local data source. Those who wish to refer to the actual census reports may contact the library at Stony Brook, where the majority of the reports are available in paper copy or on microfilm.

Political Boundaries

Most early census records only include incorporated places. Accurate maps were not produced, therefore unincorporated places could not be delineated. Since 1960, when census tracts were first established in Nassau and Suffolk Counties, detailed maps have been produced that accurately define unincorporated boundaries. Approximately 75% of the population in Nassau County and 90% of Suffolk residents live outside incorporated municipalities. Therefore census data for large communities with no political boundaries is very important in the Nassau-Suffolk Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area (SMSA).

Tables 1 and 2 describe the Towns, Villages, Cities and communities by year first reported in a Census Bureau publication or the first year for which a population count is available. In many instances the Nassau County Planning Commission or the Long Island Regional Planning Board (LIRPB) derived population figures for communities that were not listed in a Census publication. For instance, although the community of East Marion has never appeared in a Census Bureau publication, population figures are available for East Marion from 1960 to 1980 because of the derivations performed by the Long Island Regional Planning Board. Similarly, for the Village of Lake Grove, which was incorporated in 1968, and thus first appeared in 1970 Census Bureau publications, comparable population counts are available for Lake Grove for 1960 because of the derivations performed by the LIRPB.

The Census Bureau designated unincorporated communities by placing a (U) after the community name through the 1970 census. In 1980 the term Census Designated Place (CDP) was substituted for (U). In 1980 the Census Bureau required a population exceeding 5,000 in an urbanized area and 1,000 in a rural area for designation as a CDP.

Tables 3 and 4 summarize all the incorporation dates for the various villages and cities so that the user can determine the earliest census in which a city or village may be found.

Boundary Determination and Major Changes

The first complete set of boundaries for unincorporated places was produced for the 1960 Census. A combined project of the Long Island Lighting Company and both the Nassau County and Suffolk County Planning Departments resulted in specific boundaries of all unincorporated communities. This project was important because the 1950 census gave no recognition to the many areas that developed in the late 1940's. Data for the 1960 Census is available in publications produced by the Planning Departments in both Nassau and Suffolk Counties.

The Long Island Regional Planning Board reports published following the 1970 and 1980 census continued the original definitions from 1960 for Nassau County. (The Nassau-Suffolk Regional Planning Board was established in 1965 and changed its name to the Long Island Regional Planning Board in 1978.) Suffolk County unincorporated area boundaries were changed extensively in 1980 to reflect current zip codes, school district lines, and other limits that are useful in determining boundaries that can be easily recognized by local citizens and data users.

All unincorporated communities that are not published in reports prepared by the Census Bureau are delineated in local reports in 1960, 1970 and 1980. The information is obtained from computer tapes which have enumeration district or block counts that can be aggregated to produce community totals. The Long Island Lighting Company uses the same boundaries to create annual population estimates for all small areas.

Appendix Table 1, "Description of Boundary Changes for Census Designated Places in Suffolk County between 1970 and 1980", details the changes that were made in community boundaries. The boundaries of the Nassau County communities remained constant from 1970 to 1980. Maps showing the boundary changes from 1970 to 1980 have been included on pages 79 through 86.

Community Population

Tables 5 and 6 summarize census counts from 1790 to 1980 for Nassau and Suffolk Counties and the 13 towns. Nassau County separated from Queens County in 1899. Population counts for Nassau County from 1790 to 1890 were derived by aggregating the populations of Hempstead, North Hempstead and Oyster Bay Towns.

Tables 7 and 8 list all local community population for each county that has appeared in census records since 1790 and in local reports since 1960. There are references to different types of communities that should be explained. The term MCD refers to Minor Civil Division. On Long Island this term included incorporated cities and villages. The term Place originally referred to an unincorporated place. The terminology was changed in 1980 to CDP, or Census Designated Place. All unincorporated communities that were not designated by the Census Bureau are locally designated. A community may have been locally designated in one decennial year, only to become a census designated place in a following census. Although a population count is available for all locally designated places, a full range of housing and economic data may not be available.

In some cases housing and economic data can be compiled for a locally designated community by aggregating the census tracts or parts of census tracts that make up that community. In 1960, population data for some locally designated places was derived by aggregating enumeration districts which are the smaller components that made up census tracts. Whenever possible the census tracts, which make up a locally designated community, have been noted with a brief methodology of the derivation of the population statistics.

In 1970 most census tract data was aggregated from block group data in the more urban areas and by enumeration districts in the rural areas.

Villages or communities that are in 2 or more towns have separate totals for each town. Where revisions have been made to population figures because of printing errors, boundary discrepancies or enumeration mistakes, the most acceptable total is shown in the table. A footnote describes the original figure which may or may not be in a printed census report.

Appendix tables II and III indicate the availability of census reports published by the Census Bureau for Nassau and Suffolk villages and communities from 1960 to 1980. The appendix tables indicate if only a population count is available for the village or community or if the full range of general, social, economic and housing data was printed by the Census Bureau.

(1)The Nassau County total was included in Queens County. The 1790 population count for Nassau County was derived from the total of the three towns which separated from Queens in 1899.

(2)Population counts for Nassau County were not available in 1820. The only population count listed in 1820 was a total figure for Queens of 21,519. There was no town breakdown in 1820; therefore, a Nassau County total could not be derived.

(3)Organized from part of Queens County in 1899.

(4)Preliminary 1980 figure 1,428,080.

(5)Listed as South Hempstead in 1790.

(6)Town listed as South Hampstead.

(7)Preliminary 1970 figure 801,110.

(8)Listed as North Hemstead.

(9)Listed as North Hamstead.

(10)Preliminary 1970 figure 234,984.

(11)Preliminary 1970 figure 333,089.
