Suffolk County Community College Breaks Ground on New Library

Brentwood, New York- On May 11, Suffolk County Legislator Sarah Anker joined Suffolk County Community College President Dr. Shaun McKay, faculty, students and legislative colleagues for the unveiling of the college’s new library, named the Learning Resource Center (LRC) at the Michael J. Grant Campus in Brentwood. The building will become the new home to the current library that is now located in the college’s Sagtikos Building.

“It was an honor to be present with Suffolk County Community College officials and students to witness the groundbreaking of this new resource center,” said Legislator Anker. “I am confident that the LRC will be a significant benefit to the students for many years to come.”

The new LRC will house traditional library spaces and will also include a 95-seat lecture hall, tutoring rooms and computer labs.
